

New York's latest crop of luxury residential developments

Soori High Line

Acclaimed Singaporean architect Soo Chan is already well-known in Asia for incorporating landscaping and gardens within high rises, but he is now bringing his expertise to America's East Coast. As principle architect, co-developer and majority owner of Soori High Line, Soo Chan will assimilate contemporary Asian design with resort-style living in New York. Having conceived both the interiors and exterior, Chan created a development which will include 27 generous residences with double volume ceiling heights, 16 of which will contain their own private swimming pool, a feature common in most of Soo Chan's luxury residential developments.